

Salaam Club's $40,000 Gift

The Salaam Club of New York, an organization composed of Arab-American business and civic leaders, has raised $40,000 to support two programs which help autistic children, members announced.

The Al-Kafat Foundation and the Edin II School will receive funds from a recent dinner held by the Salaam

Club.

At the dinner, the club honored Greg Kelly, host of Fox Channel 5's "Good Day New York," as its Man of the Year.

The club gave its Community Award to local car dealer Robert Sabbagh.

The Lifetime Achievement Award was given to past president George Jalinos.

Each year, the Salaam Club dedicates its fundraising effort to a particular cause.

Last year, the Salaam Club donated money to the Children of the City program.

John Abi-Habib, CEO of MSI Computers, and George Prezioso, vice president of Janney Montgomery Scott, are among the club's members.
